

SHREK Hiring

The Client

A SHREK seeking to hire within its Life Sciences & Healthcare practice.

The Challenge

This role would be based in London, specifically working for two European Partners. We needed to source a research specialist who understood the life sciences market, had a strong academic profile and the potential to become a fee earner within three years.

The Solution

We mapped the London market for research specialists from several London-based executive search firms, identifying individuals with a European heritage. We also referenced our existing network to identify researchers who supported Partners working on international searches.

The Result

Our candidate held a strong academic profile, was educated in Europe, and had successfully relocated and settled in London, working within the life sciences function of a global search firm.